A 2018 Guide to MUSIC SCHOOLS
MUSIC SCHOOLS

For those schools in the listings, you’ll find detailed information on degrees offered, available areas of study, numbers of students and teachers, career and post-graduate assistance, and links to social media and financial information. We also asked each institution to describe its most “distinguishing characteristics.” We relied on the schools to tell their own stories.

Editor’s Note

In putting together the fifth annual Guide to Music Schools, two trends emerge from the 50-plus entries.

The first: Schools are now offering more and deeper areas of concentration. Never mind simply mastering a musical instrument or a skill set such as conducting—students can now develop expertise in Performing Arts Health (University of North Texas) or Lied Interpretation for Pianists (Hanns Eisler School of Music Berlin) or earn a masters degree in Contemporary Chamber Music (Oberlin Conservatory). What used to be simply “Arts Administration” has now drilled down to Arts Presenting and Live Entertainment Management (Frost School of Music); “Composition” these days might mean Screen Scoring (USC Thornton School of Music) or Performance Studies and Composition/ Musicology/Theory (University of Cincinnati College—Conservatory).

The second trend is the injection of real-world relevance in the performing arts. As the New England Conservatory points out, “Today, performance excellence is the starting point. Musicians must be more than virtuosi; they must be their own businesses.” In addition to training budding entrepreneurs, schools now put major emphases on career development and placement. Many have full-blown departments devoted to that end, such as Office of Entrepreneurship and Career Development at the Jacobs School of Music at Indiana University or the entrepreneurship grants and start-up funding for musical projects the Curtis Institute provides.

What the two trends mean, I believe, is that schools are fully cognizant of the need to equip students to put their years of training to work, but they have by no means shortened the other end of the stick, increasing the areas in which to develop expertise in the performing arts. Sounds like a winning combination.

Susan Elliott

Training at Guildhall School aims to equip you for the career of your choice. It combines academic rigor and artistic skill with a strong professional focus. All of our programs are closely engaged with the professions, through talks and workshops from visiting industry figures, work placements, mentoring, master classes, and performance collaborations. Many of our teaching staff continue to work on- or off-stage in the industry, and are well placed to provide insight, advice, and contacts. Guildhall graduates go on to employment across the globe: in the most recent survey, 96 percent of Guildhall students who left in 2015 were involved in work or further study six months later.

As a graduate, you automatically become part of the Guildhall Alumni community. The Development & Alumni Relations Office promotes networking, social opportunities, and additional benefits including a Guildhall Alumni LinkedIn group and Facebook page. You will also be eligible to apply to the Guildhall Creative Entrepreneurs scheme, a 12-month program that supports aspiring entrepreneurs from across the creative industries to set up their own businesses/social enterprises and develop necessary skills.

Our integrated academic and career advising model aims to help students explore new disciplines and areas of study, create their own specialized degree pathways, and discover passions that will shape their future endeavors. Advisors have extensive knowledge of campus resources and will show you how to navigate university systems and procedures. They also act as a liaison between you and other university staff and will acquaint you with procedures for communicating with faculty and other academic leadership when policy questions such as academic integrity, grade appeals, and academic standing arise.

Instead of visiting a separate office for career advice, undergraduate students have an ongoing, holistic conversation with a professional academic and career advisor to support them as they design their own degree pathways and prepare to effect change in the world after graduation. Career Services encourages alumni to maintain their relationship with The New School and use our services, share experiences and successes, participate in career events, and become mentors to current New School students.

WEITZENHOFER FAMILY COLLEGE OF FINE ARTS UNIVERSITY OF OKLAHOMA

The Weitzenhoffer Family College of Fine Arts at the University of Oklahoma recognizes the universal language of the arts and its power in driving innovation, research, and creative empathy. Getting your degree from OU means exposure to great standards of artistic training as well as the strategic skills and entrepreneurial toolkit needed to navigate a dynamic career in the 21st-century marketplace.

The Graduate Certificate in Arts Management and Entrepreneurship is a program in which highly competitive undergraduate seniors and graduate students may enroll alongside their degrees. College of Fine Arts partners with the Price College of Business and provides a comprehensive structure of courses designed to develop the skills needed for careers in the arts. The practicum courses provide deeply immersive, hands-on experience in a variety of distinguished internships (regional and international) and an Arts Incubation Lab (a two-week boot camp-style lab providing skills in consulting in a fast-paced program bringing creative concepts to market).

WHAT DISTINGUISHES THIS SCHOOL?
The most comprehensive college of fine arts in the state. Teems with innovation and excellence with support from its supplemental graduate certificate in Arts Management and Entrepreneurship and national Arts Incubation Lab. Its recent alumni work at all levels of the market and have won Academy, Tony, Emmy, and Grammy awards.
